So much has been written about the evil effects of opium smoking that it is only right on the audi alteram partem principle, that any testimony in favour of the habit should be given due publicity. In Formosa, the consumption of the drug is very large indeed, relatively to the population. In 1879 there was an increase in the import at Tamsui of $215\frac{1}{9}$ picula over that of the preceding year and there was no re-export: "At Takew the quantity of the drug imported also exceeded 1 that of any previous year by 219 piculs. Mr F. A. Morgan, Assistant in Charge of the Customs at Takow, in his report on the trade of the port for last year, says: - "Opium smokthat a very much larger development of the -trade cannot reasonably be expected, unless represented by the talented performers. the population increases rapidly or extensive immigration occurs. As far as I can judge from the few observations I have been able to make, the rate of consumption per head of the population must stand very high; and it is not surprising that such should be the case when here, and the absence of nearly all other forms recreation—is the matural-result of the hard l work, comfortless dwellings; and general life of the ordinary Chinaman, and opium is the form in which they are most readily obtainable." In Formosa, if anywhere, it would be thought, the alleged barieful effects of the habit would be most conspicuously apparent. vet we find Mr. Morgan recording the following opinion as the result of his experience in a district where the drug is so extensively success. Ho infused much spirit into his "I am not," save that gentleman, "one of those who consider opium to | boiling with suppressed jealousy, hate, and fury away by legislation. If half the zeal were only expended upon the drink question in the great cities of the United Kingdom by the Anglo-Oriental Society that they waste in attempts to meddle with the opimutrade, much real good might be effected. Chinese visiting England and witnessing the disgraceful scenes that nightly occur around the gin-palaces in London, or reading the statistics of crimes committed under the influence of drink, might well ask the Anti-Opium agitators to pull the beam out of their eyes: before seeking to extract the opium mote from Chinese optics. The Angle-Saxon drunkard is no doubt a less interesting individual than the Chinese opium-smoker, because he is better known, but familiarity with the latter would ashas been wasted upon him.

> THE COLLISION BETWEEN TH BRECONSHIRE" AND "BRAEMAR CASTLE:

FINDING OF THE COURT OF INQUIRY. The following is the finding of the Marin ourt of Inquiry into the collision between the teamers Breconshire and Brasmar Castle in Penang Harbour on the 28th October last:— We, the undersigned, having, at the request of iis Honour the Lieutenant-Governar of Penang nade enquiry into the circumstances of the col ision between the British $\,$ steamers Breconshireof London, Official Not. 79,674, of, 1,240.71 tons ourthen, Thomas Thomas, Master, No. of Certifi ate 32.505, and Branner Castle, of Glasgow Official No. 68.929, of 1.425 tons burthen, John Bong Thomson, Master, No. of Certificate 95,980 and of the sinking of the steamer Bracmar Castlein the harbour of Penang, and having carefully considered the evidence addreed, hereby_find that on the morning of the 28th October last the British steamer Briconar $Castle_{\sigma}$ which was then ving moored in Penang harbour, was, "at about k 40 a.m. run into by the British steamer Breconshire, which struck the Braemar Castle on the starboard side; close to the fore chains, and out her about eight feet under water, thus causing the vessel to fill and sink rapidly, she sinking about 6 a.m. in 81 fathoms water. We further find, that this collision occurred n consequence of the steamer Breconshire not unswering her helm, by reason of her getting into an eddy (several of which are known to exist off Fort Point), and from her being struck at the same time by a gust of wind on her port quarter: both of which causes prevented her answering ier helm and coming round, she being-at-reduced speed at the time.

We are of opinion that it was, under the cirsumstances, an error of indement in the Muster oudeavouring to bring his vessel into harbour as te did: but find that it was a clear morning, an hat the casualty would not have occurred had the Breconshire an overed her helm, as she no loubt would have done, but for the oircumstances

We helieve that the Master of the said steamer Breconshire was well acquainted with the harpour, that the ship was well officered, manned and properly navigated, all due precautions taken. and instructions given and observed

We also believe that the Master was justified in reducing speed, and correctly managed his cutlery. It is true, these things were mostly vessel in stopping, and reversing the engines and moving his steamer backwards and forwards

We consider that the said Muster did pavigat is vessel, generally, with proper and seamonlike care, but are unanimously of opinion that he should have let go his anchors when he found that his vessel did not answer her helm, which would have had the effect of canting her had off the steamer Bracmar Castle and bringing his steamer head to tide.

We are also of opinion that the Master of the tenmor Breconshire did all he possibly could from his master and afterwards that he have succeeded in getting the Bracmar Custle into shoal water had it not been :---1.—That the P. and O. steamer Indus had been anchored in the position which she had taken. 2.—Had the Brasmar Castle steered in th wake of the Breconshire and had she not starwas charged with being asleep on duty | boarded her helm at the time, she did, which caused her head to cant inshore, by which means Londant said he was tired and only closed the Breconshire became unmanageable, and was bliged to east off the Braemer Castle, doing ...d $2, in default, seven days' imprisonment. | whice, we find that the master of the Breconshire acted prudently. And finally :--

After carefully considering the whole of the evidence given, the Court is of oninion that Thomas Thomas, the master of the steamer Breconshirer should be consured, and be is consured accordingly, but, under the whole of the circum stances, we consider that his certificate should be when he went to the prisoner's house. None of engineers be commended for their conduct on the occasion of this unfortunate collision, and we have much pleasure in returning them their

The Court also desires to add, it considers that creat credit is due to the owners of the British steamer Breconshire for the satisfactory manner Given under our hands and seals at Penang, this 4th day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty.

the nephew. Dr. Wetzdorf stated that he found this opinion to be held most consistently by the Bedouins, who even produce quasi-scientific confirmations of it, and assert that it is true of the horse and the drome lary as well as of the human race. The antiquity of the belief is evidenced by its frequent occurrence in old proverhs and noems. According to popular Arabian, pyschology the character of a man consists of three parts; two of these parts are inherited from his uncle, while only a third is purely original and individual. Whon an appeal to Islam bears no fruit, an appeal to a man to recollect his uncle will often be efficacions, and move him to some deed of benevelonce, or touch his conscience. The lecturer said that amongst many Arabs the noble or well-born is regarded as a " muchuncled " man, or one who can point back to a genealogy of eminent uncles. The Arab is proud to claim a man of virtue or distinction as his uncle. One evening when he was sitting at the gate of an Arab town, he saw a woman running to and fro in great distress, appealing for help. On listening more intently to her exclamations, he heard her distinctly cry out, "What man among you knows his uncle?" This was equivalent to saving " Who has a noble angestor, and will act worthy of him?" The appeal immediately worked upon one of the bystanders. He sprang from amongst the crowds, went up to the woman, and offered her his assistance. Dr. Wetzdorf declared himself to be unable to say how far this wide spread belief of the Araba has any actual psychological foundation, or how far

 $FRENCH\ DIPLOMACY IN\ MEXICO.$

it is shared by other peoples,—Globe,

The resumption of diplomatic relations between France and Mexico can hardly be described as. an event of great international importance. It is not, however, without a certain commercial and political significance of its own. For thirteen years there has been no French representative in the Mexican capital-there has been no consulate in Vera Cruz. Yet little more than thirteen years ago the average Mexican thought that Europe was a country divided between France and Spain, and what knowledge of European manufactures he possessed was wholly obtained from French importations. In the cities French fashions ruled everywhere; the Mexican women put aside their mantillas and made themselves uncomfortable imitations of things wern at the Tuileries: the Mexican men eschewed the growth of their own vineyards and gardens and drank vermonth. French wines, and absinthe, and picked their tinned sardines and preserved vegetables with imported French supplied by the same French money which imported Generals Douay and Bazaine, at the head of the battalions which were to assist the Archdake Maximilian in his imperial capacity. Yet it was the unquestionable fact that the Mexicans bewed an immense appreciation of the products of French industry up to the very hour when diplomatic relations had to be broken off. It may thus be assumed that the French Government, in sending the Baron Boissy d'Auglas to Mexico, has not allowed itself to forget that the country with which relations have been so long suspended is one which will supply a now outlet for French trade. The amount of attention which has been bestowed in the Erench Chambers upon parely commercial questions within recent years makes such an interpretation of the appointment probable. We. know too, that a kee bankering after distant markets has ended in the French flag being pormanently hoisted at Tahiti: while the desire to make French shipping compete on exceptional terms with the increantile marine of other countries is likely to end in an extension of the bounty system, which may seriously inconvenience the English carrying trade.

Not improbably, however, the pening of a Republican relationship with the Mexican Republic as a political reference as well. It may be desirable to keep the tale of the Mexican expedition of Napolcon III, frosh in the mind of the French electorate. And, as Mexico boasts a Constitution which has been the same democratic basis as the Constitution of France, it may be leemed-a prudent stroke of sympathy of harnmgaudism to be on acknowledged—terms-of courtesy. Certainly, if it is intended to perpetuate the humbling, aspect of the Napoleonic legend, the name of Mexico should serve nearly as well as Sedan for Republican purposes. There may be something to be said for the necessity which urged Napoleon into the Mexico expedition. At one point of the negotiations it seemed probable that Spain would equip and send out a Bourbon Přiříce; and, situated as Napoleon was, n successful Bourbon Prince could not be tolerated even on the edge of the Pacific. Again, the cooperation of the English Government in the initial stages of the naval demonstration which France, Spain, and England went the length of making in common, no doubt deceived him into the belief that he was doing something in the interests of international credit. Stock-jobbing and glory. he probably convinced himself, were the smallest attractions contained in the Mexican policy. At least, however, there can be no doubt about the result of the expedition. There is no incident of it which may not be recalled with gusto by a Republican Government for the edification of its democracy. Tf Napoleon's Mex-An earthquake has taken place in South East | ican troops were not defeated in their attack upon Vera Cruz, Puebla, and Mexico, the peculiar behaviour of the Turces amounted to a defeat in the eyes of Europe. MINGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTS AND MANDARIN -Pronunciation.-Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkony.

For comprehensiveness and practical service rge of a flock belonging to Mr. Patrick this Work stands unrivalled. All the new perished from the cold, and also in another words which the Chinese have to late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous obt depression in the neighbourhood at the jeets in machinery, photography, telegraphy ty that has overtaken the camp. In Ta- and in science generally, which the rapid advance and about there the losses are described of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are iculable. At Arrecifes two old 'paisanos' here given in extense: Each and every word is bund dead in the snow. At Pila also the fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises were terrible; camps covered with dead for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given. the accents being carefully marked on the best evenw two girls kissing one another. principle hitherto attained. The typography well up those little missies are in their displays the success of an attempt to make the man?" inquired Joe Capp.—" Why," re- of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of Policies against FIRE, to the extent of £10,000 DAGMAR, Dahish brig. Paulsen. Captain. ism?" said he -" What the dooce d'ye Chinese and English type correspond in the size space, achieving a clearness not previously on any Building, or on Merchandise in the same, attained, and disponsing with those vast margins at the usual rates, subject to a discount of and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. . . To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration :-Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 ANGTSZE JNSURANCE be last notice, sales of New Patna at 86374. | Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000; whilst and $602½ being stated, as the stock is this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and PERMANENT RESERVE Tls. 230,000 other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of those examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published. For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chifiese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested n China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages. A Large REDUCTION in PRICE is made
